South African Carbon Tax - implications and opportunities for Australia

Carbon pricing mechanisms are being implemented in a number of countries around the world, including many in which Australian businesses invest and operate.

South Africa has been reviewing its options to develop a low carbon economy and introduce nationally appropriate mitigation actions. One of the options being considered by the South African Government is the introduction of a carbon tax on emissions from industry and business.

Baker & McKenzie and the Centre for Energy and Environmental Markets (CEEM) invite you to a breakfast seminar with Professor Harald Winkler, who will speak on the proposed South African carbon tax and other carbon and energy policy initiatives under development in Africa.

Harald Winkler is a Professor at the University of Cape Town's Energy Research Centre. He led research work for the South African Government on 'long-term mitigation scenarios', designed to lay the basis for long-term climate policy. He has also represented South Africa at negotiations under the United Nations Framework Convention on Climate Change.

Professor Winkler's visit to Australia is part of the Australian Government's Special Climate Visitor Program.

We hope that you can join us.
